

Food for Thought:

- Who was Clifton House built for?

Clifton House was built in 1783-84 for Joshua Walker, who had recently married a wealthy heiress, Susannah Need, and inherited a valuable share in the ironworks established by his father.

Joshua was ambitious. As well as having a home, he wanted a grand building to reflect his rising social status. Clifton House was a demonstration of power and wealth. Standing proud on the hillside, it boldly stated that he was 'making his mark' on Rotherham.

Joshua continued his 'social climbing' after the House was finished. In 1806, he bought Blyth Hall near Worksop, which was an even grander country residence.

Painting of Joshua Walker can be found in the Dining Room
